On the Road Again!

If you are spending the night on the road or traveling on a plane; you may want to pack one little bag just for the overnight stay; so you don't have to unpack the whole car to go into a hotel or your luggage gets lost. This will be the last bag you put in the car so it will be on top or it will be a carry-on piece of luggage along with your medicine/bathroom bag. So in this bag you will need one change of underwear for each person and maybe a change of clothes if you are messy riders in the car. You may be able to get by with wearing the clothes you wore the day before. Be prepared for the baby to spit up or spills. Then you will need an empty duffle bag for your dirty clothes. This will become your hamper while you are traveling. If you have access to a washing machine you will only need to take about half of the clothes that you would otherwise. A bathroom bag; this is the family bag with toiletries for everyone. Your personal items will go in your makeup bag, shaving bag or diaper bag.

Here is what you will pack in the car.

One suitcase for each person traveling (small duffle bags take up less room and pack better in the car. Kelly and I are the queens of packing.)

One Family Bathroom Bag with Ziplock bags preventing spills.

A Bag with Snacks and Water

Computer Bag (I don't go anywhere without mine)

Gifts if you have room or ship them early if you don't

A small backpack for each child with their books, toys and games.

Directions for getting there and a map. I don't trust MapQuest.

Coats, umbrella, a blanket if people get cold and little pillows.

And if you have several dress-up events you may want to pack all the good clothes for the whole family into one bag so the holiday clothes do not get riffled through in the children's bags or worn without you knowing. In this bag include the whole outfit; from head to toe: Hairbows, jewelry, stockings, tights, socks, shoes. You may not be able to get the shoes in the bag so put them in a canvas tote.

Time to Load Up the Car!

Now what could we have forgotten? Take a few minutes to sit down with a cup of tea and go over this list before you pack up the car. Does all your luggage have tags?

If you have a baby are you taking your travel babybed? If yes then pack it first; unless you want to use it if you are staying in a hotel on the way to your destination. Then it will be one of the last things you pack.

Now depending on whether you have a car with a trunk, a Van or SUV. You may want to use a cargo net to hold the luggage in place in the event of an accident. I have a station wagon and I use my cargo net all the time. You can get them at the auto parts store or WalMart.

Position the cargo net in the vehicle if you are using one. It goes first because it has to be hooked in place around the luggage. Then get all the luggage staged by the back door: If you have helpers.

Put the luggage that you will not need and the gifts that you want to hide in first. Keep the things that you will need easy access to toward the last and on top. Make sure that each child has his or her backpack and coat. Coats can go on top of the luggage. Children don't need to wear coats while they are strapped into car seats. Keep a place for the snack bag and water bottles; strapped in and easy access.

Now where is your purse, the extra set of car keys, some Wet Ones, tickets, maps and some holiday music? You are ready to Go!!!
